1

Abstract

A system and method for managing alert incidents or indications in an enterprise processes information about the enterprise using tables, databases, and rules to determine whether the information is worthy of declaring an incident for 5   action to be taken. The inputted information is filtered and throttled using the rules, decision tables, databases and defaults to display the incident in a useful format that shows a defined conclusion for analysis.